John F. Kennedy
January 19, 1963

The John Fitzgerald Kennedy Library is dedicated to the memory of our nation's thirty-fifth President and to all those who through the art of politics seek a new and better world. Our purpose is to advance the study and understanding of President Kennedy's life and career and the times in which he lived; and to promote a greater appreciation of America's political and cultural heritage, the process of governing and the importance of public service. To that end the library collects, preserves, and makes available for research the documents and memorabilia of President Kennedy and many of his contemporaries.

This publication is an introductory guide to the library's holdings. Besides the papers of John F. Kennedy and Robert F. Kennedy, it lists and briefly describes more than 300 collections of personal papers and government agency records as well as audiovisual collections, printed material, and oral history interviews. Detailed finding aids to individual collections are available in the library's main research room. The library announces significant acquisitions and openings through periodic updated editions of this guide and through its World Wide Web site at www.jfklibrary.org. The library also makes announcements in Prologue, the journal of the National Archives.

Dedicated on October 20, 1979, the John F. Kennedy Library is a Presidential library operated by the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA). The library makes its holdings available on an equal basis to anyone who shows a clear need to use its unique resources within the limits required by statute, deeds, and deposit agreements. We invite your comments and suggestions about the usefulness of this publication and the quality of library service.

INTRODUCTION

This guide lists and describes the holdings of the John Fitzgerald Kennedy Library. It provides assistance to researchers in the proper and productive use of research materials by including information on locating material, using facilities, understanding access restrictions, and citing library holdings. Please direct questions on these and other matters concerning the use of library resources to the reference staff.

As in the 1993 edition, manuscript collections and oral history interviews are listed alphabetically. An index is included to help researchers locate relevant collections or interviews and an appendix contains an interlibrary loan policy statement, research grant application forms, and permission request forms. Researchers may photocopy the latter to expedite requesting permission to use certain collections or oral history transcripts.

Keep in mind that, except for U.S. Government agency records, the holdings of the John F. Kennedy Library are donated historical materials. They are materials that were created by private individuals and were donated to the Kennedy Library under terms and conditions specified by each donor and accepted by the Archivist of the United States. Access to each collection or oral history interview is determined by a formal deed of gift or a deposit agreement. The library staff adheres to these governing instruments in administering library holdings.

A copy of this publication is available on the library's World Wide Web site at www.jfklibrary.org.

RESEARCH AT THE KENNEDY LIBRARY

Research facilities

The research facilities of the Kennedy Library consist of three separate research rooms. The main research room on the fourth floor is also the access point for using the other research rooms. The audiovisual room is located on the third floor, and the Ernest Hemingway Room is on the fifth floor. The main room is open on weekdays from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and on Saturdays from 9:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. by appointment. Hemingway materials may be used in the main research room on Saturdays. The audiovisual archives are closed on weekends. Researchers should make appointments to use either the audiovisual archives or the Hemingway Collection (telephone numbers are listed on page 4). Research rooms are closed on Sundays and Federal holidays.

Application procedures

The Kennedy Library is a research archive, not a general public library. It houses materials that are valuable and unavailable elsewhere. Because of this, the library staff adheres to professional archival security measures in administering library holdings. Prior to visiting the library you should contact the reference staff to describe your proposed research topic and to find out whether material is available on your topic. The reference staff will provide you with information about relevant holdings, their extent, and their character. When you arrive at the library you will complete an application to conduct research and you must present a driver's license, military identification card, passport or other current identification containing your photograph. After a short interview with a member of the reference staff, you will be registered for a researcher identification card. You will not be issued a researcher identification card if the library staff determines that the records that you wish to use are not in the legal custody of the Kennedy Library or if your research needs can be met by secondary sources available at other libraries. Specific research room rules and a guide to proper document handling procedures will be given to you upon registration.

Reference services

Reference staff assist you by providing:

- Information about library holdings
- Instruction and advice in locating and using materials
- Document and published material reference service to researchers on-site, by telephone, by mail or by E-mail
- A limited interlibrary loan service
- A limited bibliographical service
- Document duplication service (A self-service photocopier is also available in the main research room)
- Informational literature and selected reading lists

Reference staff do not provide:

- Extensive, specialized, or evaluative research
- Selection of items for you for research or duplication
- Monetary appraisal of collections of documents, books or memorabilia
- Critical review of your manuscript for opinion or accuracy

Staff answer specific questions received by mail, telephone, Fax or E-mail if the information you need is brief, is not readily obtainable elsewhere, and is contained in the library's holdings. Extensive research into your subject by staff is not available. You may be advised that a request cannot be filled unless you come to the library to conduct research in person. Please consult standard reference sources in a local public or university library to answer ready reference questions before contacting the Kennedy Library. Most of these questions can be answered by checking newspaper or periodical indexes, encyclopedias, chronologies, biographical works, and compilations of Presidential speeches. The library maintains a World Wide Web site at www.jfklibrary.org that contains substantial reference sources, news, museum exhibits, photographs, sound files and other materials that are frequently requested from the reference staff. Requests for copies of specific documents received by mail, telephone, Fax or E-mail are subject to similar limitations.

Please direct your telephone inquiries to the appropriate number listed below:

Locating material

This guide is the starting point in your search for material. It lists collections alphabetically and it contains important information about access to and use of library holdings.

Detailed finding aids (registers, inventories, indexes, folder title lists) are available in the main research room for each collection that is open for research. There is an automated catalog for the book collection, and card catalogs for the oral history collection, House and Senate hearings, and for a file of selected periodical articles. Finding aids for audiovisual material and the Hemingway Collection are located in their respective research rooms. You can borrow copies of finding aids through the interlibrary loan service (see page 115).

Success in locating relevant material depends on many factors, among which are the availability of material on the topic, your familiarity with the people and events of the Kennedy administration, and the ability of you and the reference staff to interact productively. The staff will provide you with a general introduction and specific suggestions during your initial orientation. Individual finding aids are the main locating tools. You should discuss your topic in some detail with a member of the reference staff and continue to ask questions whenever they arise. The reference staff will gladly provide suggestions to you whenever needed. Within the limits of the Privacy Act, the staff will keep you informed about work being done in the library by other researchers on the same or related topics. A list of researchers who have given permission to inform you of their work is available on request.

Opening of material

Processing archival material is an ongoing labor-intensive activity entailing, among other activities, arrangement, description, reviewing, and preservation. The library staff must process a collection to an acceptable state before it is opened for research use. When processing work is completed, a finding aid is placed in the main research room, and an opening announcement is added to the openings file. The library makes public announcements in this publication, through its World Wide Web site (www.jfklibrary.org), and in Prologue (the journal of the National Archives). You should call or write to the reference department for the latest information about openings or changes in collection status.

Terms of access

Withholding individual documents from research use for specified or indefinite periods of time is sometimes required by the terms of the deeds by which donors give their materials to the library, by law, or by Executive Order. For each document withheld a document withdrawal sheet is placed in the file to show what has been withheld and the reason why. Access restrictions can apply to an entire collection or to parts of a collection.

RESEARCH AT THE KENNEDY LIBRARY

Reasons for access limitations include:

Removal according to the provisions listed in the donor's deed of gift or deposit agreement. You may appeal such closures in writing to the Director of the Kennedy Library. Forms to appeal closures are available in the main research room.

Removal according to general National Archives and Records Administration criteria, principally documents relating to investigations of individuals, documents the disclosure of which would constitute an unwarranted invasion of privacy, or documents that libel a living person. You may appeal such closures in writing to the Director of the Kennedy Library.

Removal required by national security classification. You may appeal such removals through the mandatory review process administered according to Executive Order 12958. Consult the reference staff for proper forms and procedures.

Collections listed as “Open” can be examined without restriction. Although individual documents may be withheld from these collections, and withdrawals may be appealed, the collections themselves are open to all researchers.

Collections listed as “Open in part” contain subfiles, series or sections that are not currently available for examination. The open portions of these collections can be examined without restriction. Generally, portions are closed for reasons noted above or the particular subfiles, series or sections are not yet processed.

Collections listed as “Permission required” can be examined only with the written permission of the donor or the donor's legal representative. To obtain permission you should photocopy a permission request form (see page 116), sign and date it, and send it to the donor with a cover letter explaining the nature of your research. The donor decides specific conditions of access and sends the original completed form directly to the Kennedy Library. You will then be notified of the donor's preferences by the reference staff. The library does not accept permission forms from anyone except the donor or the donor's legal representative, nor does the library act as an agent or intermediary to obtain permission. The library only accepts permission forms containing original signatures. Telephone permissions, faxes, photocopies, or completed forms sent or brought to the library by researchers are not acceptable. You will not be able to use a collection until you co-sign the permission form indicating that you accept the terms the donor has specified. You can find addresses for most donors in a current edition of Who's Who in America or other biographical sources. Consult the reference staff to obtain addresses of individuals whose names do not appear in these sources.

Collections listed as “Closed” are not currently available for research. Reasons for closure vary depending upon whether a deed has been completed, the terms of individual deeds or deposit agreements, the presence of national security classified information, or whether the collection has been processed to an acceptable state by library staff. Consult the reference staff to determine the specific reason a collection is closed and for changes in the status of collections. This publication also uses “closed” to describe collections that contain fragmentary amounts of open material but are substantially closed. In these cases notations are provided in the collection description for the small amount of open material that is available.

Citing library holdings

When citing Kennedy Library holdings you should clearly show the box location of individual items. This helps other researchers who may wish to see documents that are cited in published works and reference staff members who may be asked to locate complete texts of cited documents. You should follow as closely as possible the titles and terms used to list collections in this publication.

RESEARCH AT THE KENNEDY LIBRARY

The fictitious examples below show the information to be included in complete citations to various types of library holdings. After the first citation to a collection or to the Kennedy Library, abbreviations should be used (e.g., WHCSF for White House Central Subject Files and JFKL for John F. Kennedy Library).

1. Letter, John F. Kennedy to James M. Curley, April 20, 1948, "Cuddy-Dedrick" folder, Pre-Presidential Papers, box 32, John F. Kennedy Library. [Use the title as it appears on the folder].

Photocopy and duplication service

Photocopy and duplication service is available at fees set by NARA. Consult reference staff for current rates. Fees are payable in advance of processing an order. The library reserves the right to refuse to process orders for researchers who have outstanding unpaid balances at the Kennedy Library or any other NARA facility. Orders are filled on a first-paid first-processed basis. Rush orders are not accepted. Orders placed on-site are given preference over mail orders of the same date. Processing of mail orders of over 100 pages may be delayed or refused. Members of the reference staff do not select documents for you for duplication. Self-service photocopying is available at reduced fees. Payment may be made by personal check, money order, or credit card. All payments must be made in U.S. currency. Foreign checks and money orders must be drawn on a branch of a U.S. bank.

Mail-order copies are sent by regular mail. Alternate shipping arrangements can be made at your expense. The library assumes no responsibility for loss or damage to mail orders by the Post Office or other carriers. There is no warranty expressed or implied for the quality of reproductions beyond providing the best copy using available equipment. Except in the event of staff error, returns are not accepted, and refunds are not made.

Copyright

The copyright law of the United States, Title 17, U.S. Code, governs the making of photocopies or other reproductions of copyrighted material. Under certain conditions specified in the law, libraries and archives are authorized to furnish a photocopy or other reproduction. One of the specified conditions is that the photocopy or reproduction of copyrighted material is not to be "used for any purpose other than private study, scholarship, or research." If a user makes a request for or later uses a photocopy or reproduction for purposes in excess of "fair use," that user may be liable to prosecution for copyright infringement. This institution reserves the right to refuse to accept a copy order if, in its judgment, fulfillment of the order would involve violation of copyright law.

Donors of many of the collections housed in the Kennedy Library also donate copyright to the United States Government, effectively transferring their letters and documents to the public domain. Copyright in documents located within these collections that are written by persons other than the donor generally remains with the writer or creator for his lifetime plus 70 years. The copyright law extends its protection to unpublished works from the moment of creation in a tangible form. Direct your questions concerning copyright to the reference staff.

ARCHIVES AND MANUSCRIPTS

The papers of John Fitzgerald Kennedy are being opened for research according to terms specified in the deed of gift executed between the Kennedy family and the Archivist of the United States in 1965. Essentially, the deed provides that all materials can be made available except those that are national security classified, those that concern an individual's strictly personal matters, or those that may be used to embarrass, injure, or harass any living person.

The library staff identifies and segregates documents that must be closed under the general guidance of an independent advisory committee appointed by the donor. The staff reviews closed documents on request to decide if the original reasons for closure still exist and if individual documents may be opened for research.

Working files of individual members of the President's staff are also part of the papers of John Fitzgerald Kennedy and are administered according to the terms of the same deed of gift. They can be located separately in the general list of collections under the staff member's name and are identified as "White House Staff Files. The Presidential Papers of John F. Kennedy."

The Kennedy Library is the repository of the papers of many other individuals active in public affairs. Most were friends and associates of John or Robert Kennedy or were administration officials. Others had little or no direct connection with the careers of either John or Robert Kennedy. These papers have significant enduring value to an understanding of the context in which the Kennedy administration existed and to a more thorough understanding of mid-20th century America.

The library also holds microfilm or paper copies of selected records of 55 United States Government departments and agencies. These are administered according to terms determined by each agency. In several cases, the complexity of the restrictions and the location of restricted and unrestricted documents on the same reel of microfilm render these collections unusable until the originals have been opened for research at NARA. Researchers should check the NARA World Wide Web site, www.nara.gov, for further information about the original hard copy of these collections.

Access to collections is subject to terms and conditions imposed by donors. Without a formal deed of gift, access is subject to understandings expressed in correspondence or memorandums of agreement, pending the negotiation of a deed. In all cases, national security classified information, wherever it occurs, is governed by current law or Executive Order. The library does not permit access to collections that have not yet been processed to an acceptable status by library staff. See page 4 for an explanation of terms of access.

AUDIOVISUAL ARCHIVES

The films, photographs, audio and videotapes that are maintained in the collections of the library's audiovisual archives department came to the library from a number of sources: the White House and other United States Government agencies; American and foreign television networks, newspapers and magazines, private organizations and thousands of individuals. Together these materials form a rich, important documentary resource for studying John F. Kennedy's life and administration and the political and social milieu of his time. The library also holds significant collections that document the activities of Robert F. Kennedy, Edward M. Kennedy, Joseph P. Kennedy and Rose Fitzgerald Kennedy; associates and contemporaries of the Kennedys, and Ernest Hemingway.

The core of the audiovisual archives comprises the photographs, sound recordings and motion picture film made by White House personnel from 1961 through 1963. The following pages list and briefly describe these materials and other collections in the audiovisual archives holdings. Detailed finding aids are available in the audiovisual archives research room. Those who wish more information about the collections, reproduction services, or who wish to make an appointment to use the audiovisual archives (strongly recommended) can write or call 617- 929-4530 (Fax: 617-929-4599). ORAL HISTORY INTERVIEWS

Begun in 1964 with a grant from the Carnegie Corporation, the oral history program is one of the oldest activities of the John F. Kennedy Library. Modeled on the Columbia University oral history program, its goal is to collect, preserve, and make available interviews conducted with individuals who have recollections of events and people associated with John F. Kennedy. The tapes and transcripts are meant to be a supplement to documentary research and are best used in conjunction with other library holdings.

The collection totals more than 1,100 interviews. Interviews that have been transcribed and accessioned by the library are listed in this section alphabetically by the last name of the person interviewed. Additional listings are made as interviews are accessioned or opened to research. Interviews are open to research without restriction unless otherwise indicated. Any restrictions on access, copying, or quotation are set by the interviewee as a condition of granting the interview and for permitting it to be included in the collection. Restrictions are self-explanatory.

Interviews are not intended primarily for publication, nor are they intended to be memorials to President Kennedy. They are meant to contribute to a more complete understanding of John F. Kennedy's life, of his Presidency, and of the major events and personalities of his time.

Some of those interviewed are prominent public figures, others are relatively obscure private individuals who played limited or specialized roles in the history of the times. To add breadth, the collection includes interviews with members of Congress, administration officials, national and state political leaders, business and labor leaders, journalists, civil rights leaders, foreign government officials, and people who opposed Kennedy administration policies.

In a similar manner, to supplement the personal papers of Robert F. Kennedy, the collection includes a series of interviews on his career, concentrating on his role as Attorney General of the United States, Senator from New York, and candidate for the Presidency in 1968.

In most cases, the interviewee reviews the transcript and makes some changes or corrections to the verbatim record prior to its release for research use. These are chiefly additions or corrections of fact or modifications in the flow of thought. In some cases, there are deletions or additions of substantive material. The transcript, therefore, represents the interviewee's considered judgment as to what he or she believes should stand as the historical record. For this reason, although you may listen to a reference copy of a tape of an unrestricted interview, citation, quotation and use in publications is limited to the final transcript form. Tapes are retained for background purposes only, so that the you may better understand the personality of the interviewee and the atmosphere of the interview.

Each person interviewed may attach conditions to the use of the tape and transcript of his or her interview. These conditions are incorporated into a legal agreement between the interviewee and NARA and are scrupulously followed by the staff of the Kennedy Library.

Research use of the interviews

This list contains 1,012 interviews. In some cases you may use the transcript only with the written permission of the person interviewed. It is your responsibility to obtain permission directly from the donor to see a "permission required" interview. The staff of the Kennedy Library does not act as an agent or intermediary for you to obtain permission. You may photocopy the permission request form (see page 117) in order to request permission from a donor. You can find addresses of most donors in a current edition of Who's Who in America or other such biographical directories. Library staff can provide current addresses of many donors who are not listed in these sources. Name and subject indexes to open interviews are available in the main research room. You may borrow most open interviews through the library's interlibrary loan service. (see page 115). This list includes copies of interviews conducted by other institutions such as the Lyndon Baines Johnson Library, Columbia University, and the U.S. Senate Historical Office. These interviews are not available through interlibrary loan from the Kennedy Library. You should contact the original depository to determine if an interview is available for interlibrary loan.

Unless specific restrictions are included in the foreword to an interview transcript, you may quote, paraphrase, or cite the transcript in publications. The preferred form of citation is listed on page 5.

Direct quotations from transcripts in which the donor has retained copyright are limited to brief portions allowable under the doctrine of "fair use" written into the copyright law of the United States, sections 107 and 108. You must obtain permission from the donor or his heirs to quote more extensive portions of these transcripts, or to publish entire transcripts.

Unless specifically prohibited by donor restrictions, the library provides copies of transcripts or portions of transcripts at fees set by NARA. You may not further copy, reproduce or deposit these copies of transcripts in other institutions, or disseminate them without the written permission of the Director of the John Fitzgerald Kennedy Library.

Researchers who use the oral history collection or other library holdings are encouraged to donate books, articles, research papers, dissertations, theses, and other products of research to the library to make its printed materials collection as definitive as possible. (See page 109 for a description of the printed materials collection). The library welcomes the donation or deposit of tapes or transcripts of interviews conducted by researchers with associates of President Kennedy, Robert Kennedy, or others who have participated in the political and historical events of mid-20th-century America.

Interviews are listed as follows:

PRINTED MATERIALS

The printed materials collection is a special library of published and unpublished literature relating to mid-20th century American history, politics, and government, centering on the life of John F. Kennedy. The collection comprises books, dissertations, conference papers, government publications, periodicals, microforms, theses, student papers, and news clippings. It is intended to serve as a definitive body of Kennedy-related secondary literature. Materials are made available on-site to researchers whose information needs cannot be met by the holdings of other libraries.

The Kennedy Library's automated catalog is a dictionary catalog arranged primarily according to the Library of Congress classification system. Any item can be located by author, subject, or title. While adopting many Library of Congress classifications and subject headings, the Kennedy Library imposes special features on standard cataloging and classification to index more precisely events or issues of John F. Kennedy's life and career. The library uses over 200 specialized subject headings. For example, titles on the Cuban missile crisis are filed under the special subject heading "KENNEDY, JOHN FITZGERALD--FOREIGN RELATIONS--CUBA, OCTOBER, 1962" rather than under the Library of Congress heading "UNITED STATES--FOREIGN RELATIONS--CUBA, OCTOBER, 1962." The heading "KENNEDY, JOHN FITZGERALD--CIVIL RIGHTS--MISSISSIPPI" lists titles dealing with the role of the Kennedy administration in integrating the University of Mississippi. In other cases, both a Kennedy administration-specific heading as well as a standard Library of Congress heading are used. For example, a title on the history of the space program that deals significantly, but not exclusively, with the policies of the Kennedy administration may be filed under "KENNEDY, JOHN FITZGERALD--SPACE PROGRAM and U.S.--SPACE PROGRAM." A complete subject authority list is available. Similarly, the Kennedy Library assigns new classification numbers to works where the Library of Congress assigned number is deemed inappropriate for local needs.

The library's vertical file contains selected or noteworthy articles, student papers, and related types of printed materials that provide further coverage of events and personalities of the Kennedy years. There is a subject, author, periodical title, and chronological index to this portion of the file. The vertical file is also a valuable source of miscellaneous news clippings about President Kennedy, his family, Presidential libraries, and the Kennedy Library, arranged broadly by subject matter and chronologically.

Printed materials can only be used in the research rooms. However, at the determination of the librarian, some materials may be made available through interlibrary loan. See the interlibrary loan statement on page 115 for details.

The printed materials collection also serves as a bibliographical center for Kennedy studies. Reading lists on John Kennedy, Robert Kennedy, and the Kennedy family are available in the main research room. The staff can provide literature searches and bibliographical listings on request.

INDEX

Unlike books, which can be classified under a few key index terms, even small bodies of documents or short interviews may need to be indexed under dozens of specific subject entries. The index that follows serves to point you to collections or interviews in the preceding pages. It is an index to this publication rather than a definitive content index to the holdings of the Kennedy Library. Index terms are drawn primarily from the descriptions used in the alphabetical listings. Finding aids, inventories, box lists, the card index to oral history interviews, and other on-site aids remain the principal means of locating materials within collections or interviews held by the library. This index is designed as a convenience to help you identify collections or interviews potentially relevant to your topic.

Index terms for document collections include broad subject categories ("International affairs"), specific forms of materials ("Correspondence files"), selected series within collections ("Countries"), position titles ("Ambassador to Poland"), or descriptive matter found in the alphabetical list of collection titles. Also indexed are titles of books or major publications ("Profiles in Courage"), selected occupational categories ("Journalist"), specific position titles ("Special Counsel to the President"), organizations ("Columbia University"), affiliations ("Public Administration Clearing House"), and U.S. government agencies. Date ranges or other information important for clarification are added in parenthesis. If an entire collection can be categorized in a few specific subject terms, these terms are included. Entries are provided for collections that contain materials on unusual or unexpected subjects ("World War II - War crimes," "News clippings (World War I)", etc.). Please consult the alphabetical lists for clarification of an indexed item and to ascertain collection status. Terms that are direct entries or that are cross-referenced in the preceding pages are omitted from the index.

Keep in mind that John F. Kennedy served as Representative (1947-52), Senator (1953-61), and President (1961-63). His papers, therefore, contain documents of varying quantity and form on virtually every term indexed in the following pages as well as on subjects not chosen for inclusion in the index.

Index terms for oral history interviews are less detailed as they do not provide subject content indexing. More often than not, though, subjects covered in interviews are apparent from descriptions used in this guide. Entries for interviews are simply reverse listings of oral history descriptions. For example, John Moors Cabot is described in the alphabetical listing of interviews as "Ambassador to Brazil (1959-61); Ambassador to Poland (1962-65)." His interview is indexed under "Ambassador to Brazil," "Ambassador to Poland," "Brazil," and "Poland." One can assume that both positions are discussed in the interview. In addition, a cross-reference from "International affairs" and "Diplomats" refers the reader to "Ambassador."

Listings under each index heading are divided by form. "MS" refers to archives and manuscript collections, "AV" refers to audiovisual materials, "OH" refers to oral history interviews and "PM" refers to printed materials.
